INTERNATIONALER SOMMERKURS, ERFURT 1984

This past summer I had the pleasure and privilege of studying GDR literature at the Pädagogische Hochschule "Dr. Theodor Neubauer" in Erfurt. The three week seminar on GDR literature was one of five courses offered to foreign students, the other courses including Deutsche Gegenwartssprache, Praktische Phonetik, Bildungswesen der DDR, and Gesellschaftliches Leben der DDR. All of the courses were immensely interesting; my only regret was that there was only time for GDR literature, and that was overwhelming. Concentrating on short prose pieces, the seminar offered an introduction not only to principle GDR authors, but an opportunity to see how extremely competent GDR scholars approach their own national literature. In addition to discussions of individual authors, we heard well-prepared lectures on a number of historical and theoretical subjects; a partial list would include: "Zu Problemen der kleinen epischen Form," "Entwicklungstendenzen der DDR-Literatur in den 80er Jahren," "Tendenzen der zeitgenössischen DDR-Dramatik," and "Zu Positionen der Literatur für Kinder und Jugendliche in der DDR." The bulk of our time, however, was spent exchanging ideas with our course leaders, Dr. Helga Tille and Dr. Christina Basche, who were as interested in our approaches to literature as we were in theirs.

Aside from the seminars and the considerable amount of time spent reading, nearly every day was filled with a special activity--a film, a special guest at an after dinner discussion, a
