Presenter Biography:

Brent A. Anders, M.Ed., is the senior electronic media coordinator for Kansas State University. His work includes: educational media consulting (working directly with instructors and departments), as well as videography/filmmaking (directing, capturing, script writing, editing, and final production). Additionally Anders works directly with live-webcasting and web accessibility/usability.

Anders has a Bachelor’s degree in Psychology (human computer interaction focus) and a Master’s degree in Education with an instructional technology focus. Currently, Anders is pursuing a PhD in education with focus in Adult Learning and online instruction.

Anders also currently serves in the Kansas Army National Guard as a First Sergeant. His primary duties include soldier training, management, command assistance, as well as long range planning and organization. His additional duty is that of an international instructor with Kansas’ sister-state, Armenia. Anders has traveled there multiple times to provide courses in developing their Noncommissioned Officer structure and soldier utilization.

Anders has additionally contributed to multiple published works dealing specifically with higher education. The focus of these publications has ranged from video and graphics, to motivation, and the use of emotion to enhance educational success.

Anders has been in the education field for over 20 years dealing with online learning, educational technology/media, military training, and higher education in general.