From the Editor

Our journal has a new look. The Editorial Board has taken the decision, endorsed by Council, to devote our annual publication to articles on topics that fall within the Society's field of interest: academic dress—history, practice and design. These will of course include papers submitted by successful candidates for the Fellowship of the Burgon Society. Accordingly, the journal has been renamed Transactions of the Burgon Society and the format changed from A4 to Crown Quarto, a more conventional size for a learned periodical. Reports and latest news of the Society's activities will now appear in a separate newsletter to be circulated to members several times a year under the revived title Burgon Notes.

I apologize for the long delay in publication, but I hope you will agree that the contents of this number were worth the wait. This issue of Transactions includes work on a variety of topics: the history of robes in Germany and France; English academic dress from the Middle Ages to modern times; and the use of the British Colour Council numbering system by British and Commonwealth universities.

I am very grateful for the support and practical help of members of the Editorial Board: Bruce Christianson, William Gibson and Nicholas Groves. We already have several papers for inclusion in the next volume of Transactions, but we would welcome more contributions from Burgon Society members and others for publication in future issues.
