In Search of Place

*...for the listener...nothing himself, beholds
Nothing that is not there and the nothing that is.*

—WALLACE STEVENS

You come to the prairie searching for a way
out, constrained by agendas, contracts
and a sense you've missed something more than a business opportunity.

You're ready to negotiate. Slow
the pace. You've nothing to lose.

Opting for a dirt road, you are astonished
by nothingness.

But you stay to see it through.

You borrow a 4 wheeler, surprised the rancher
tosses you keys—points to wheel ruts,
says, Follow the two-track to find your way.

You unload the cell phone and ear buds,
the plastic, the bills and change, the watch
and ring and ride to the crown of a hill.

You cut the engine, wade into bluestem,
listen for the something—
a word perhaps,

and consider your next move.
