‘Time Flies’

An Aquarelle graphite and oil crayon drawing on Stonehenge paper, “Time Flies” is by Teresa Schmidt, professor of art at Kansas State University. The drawing is part of the art faculty’s exhibition at the university’s Marianna Kistler Beach Museum of Art, “Here, and Now.” Schmidt, an art faculty member since 1972, describes the work as a double self-portrait, showing her first younger and now older, with a surprised look. “Spontaneity, rhythm and expression are a simple but constant goal,” Schmidt said of her art. “Most of my work is larger, organic and abstract; this was done for a fun image of this aging artist.”
