On The Cover

The illustration shown was used in direct mail and poster promotion for the Agribusiness Computer Short Course and Trade Show at the Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences, University of Florida. Currently, it is being used in ads in five farm journals related to computers in agriculture.

Drawn from an in-house photo, the pen and ink illustration was used to gain a bolder, more striking visual appearance. The concept was designed to promote user-friendliness of computers to farmers, and does not reflect gender, so that the glove could belong to a home gardener, farm wife, ag worker, farm family member—nearly anyone who works with their hands.
