Hampshire as part of the Daughters of Eve - Contemporary Women Writers of the GDR project. They will be available to give readings (some in English) and participate in classes and discussions for 2-3 weeks after their arrival at U.N.H.

Maja-Michaela Wiens was born in 1952 and grew up in Berlin. She has been a statistician, an economics student, and a waitress and bartender. Since 1981 she has been a self-employed writer. Her novel Traumgrenzen appeared in 1984. She has published many short stories in anthologies and journals, and has written reportage, radio plays, and most recently the film Trautes Heim, written with Andreas Klich Wiens. She is active in the peace movement and, having served many years as chairperson of her district Youth Welfare Commission, is familiar with the conditions and problems of urban youngsters in the GDR.

Andreas Klich Wiens was born in 1953 and grew up in a small town in Thüringen. After completing an apprenticeship as a telephone technician, serving in the army (later becoming a conscientious objector), beginning and dropping a degree program in business, and working in theater, opera, and various other jobs, he studied at the Literaturinstitut in Leipzig from 1981-84 and has been a self-employed writer and teacher/facilitator of children's, young adults' and workers' amateur writers' groups since 1985. He has published short stories in many anthologies and is working on the filming of "Trautes Heim" (written with Maja Wiens), another film, and a novel Das Achte Gebot. He is also active in the peace movement and has experience working with young people.
